WISDOMPARKER.COM

OPERATION M.O.E.

M.O.E.

MISSION OVER EGO

EXECUTIVE SELF DEFENSE

MISSION FIRST. EGO LAST.

BY DON PARKER

10 DEVOTIONS

CONTENTS

01 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Intro
02 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Part Two
03 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Part Three
04 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Part Four
05 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Part Five
06 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Part Six
07 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Part Seven
08 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Part Eight
09 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Part Nine
10 "M.O.E." Mission Over Ego Part Ten

MISSION BRIEF

“If I alone bear witness about myself, my testimony is not true.”
JOHN 5:31 (NKJV)

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

Executive Self Defense Series.

"M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego)

Part One

Good morning operators! Let's dive right into this mornings edification. And I need for you to lock in and listen closely to my analysis. Most men are walking corpses. Yes, I said it. They breathe but they don't live. They move but they don't act. They speak but they're not saying anything. Ahhhhh...But, not you, my friend. You're different.

You're here reading this mornings edification, because you don't want to rot with the rest of the masses. You want something greater and that's good. That's what we're here to do. However, you must be mindful there are certain thlngs that society will never tell you. One in particular is that your ego is your enemy. Let that thought marinate in your head for a moment.

Every time you seek validation, every time you seek approval, every time you make decisions to impress people. Who really don't matter. You're actually feeding the parasite inside you that will eventually drain you dry. In ESD we teach our people that power doesn't belong to the loudest, it belongs to the focused man, the calculated man, the man who moves in silence, while the lesser man announces his every move.

Here's something I need you to really understand and come to grips with. Your mission isn't to be liked, its to be effective, unstoppable, a force that obstacles break against. But first we must kill something inside of you. And It's the version of you that craves attention more than results. The version that needs permission to be assertive and dangerous.

"THAT VERSION DIES TODAY!" You must be ready to starve the right enemy. Our goal is to tear you down and properly reconstruct you. So, let me show you how your ego has been destroying you. Right now, at this very moment there's a war happening inside your mind and you're losing. Your ego is whispering "sweet poison" into your mind.

Asking questions like..."What will they think?" "Do they respect me?" "Do I look strong enough?" And like a fool, you listen. You pause. You hesitate. You second guess the very instincts that could set you free. This is a psychological trap. Because the ego doesn't want power. It wants performance. It doesn't want victory. It wants applause.

And here's the sick joke. While you're busy performing for an audience that doesn't care, other men, quieter men, sharper men are taking everything you think you deserve. There's a saying famous gangsters like Al Capone used to quote: "It’s better to be feared than loved." In ESD we teach "It's better to be effective than either." Reread that once again for maximum impact.

The man who is obsessed with his image is a slave. The man obsessed with his mission is a king. Let me dig into this thing like an ice cream scooper so you'll get all that goodness resting at the bottom of the container. Your ego makes you reactive. Someone disrespects you and you explode, wasting time and energy on battles that don't matter.

Someone doubts you, you scramble to prove yourself, giving away your power for free. Stop. The focused man doesn't react to noise. He doesn't defend his reputation with words. He builds empires while others argue. He understands that silence is a weapon, that mystery is power and that the loudest man in the room is usually the weakest.

Your ego wants to be seen. But, your mission demands that you become invisible. It's all about M.O.E. (Mission Over Ego). There's only two things that should be your primaries in your life. God and your mission. That's it, that's all. Your mission is the singular objective that justifies your existence, the thing that makes you dangerous.

Every great man in history had one. Caesar had Rome. Alexander had the world. What do you have? If you can't answer that question one sentence, you've already lost. Now, here's what separates the focused operators from the distracted masses. Operators don't have 10 goals, 50 interests, and 100 hobbies. They only have one mission, and everything else is either fuel for it or friction against it.

The moment you identify your mission, I mean truly identify it, everything will change. Suddenly the opinions of others become background noise. Distractions will reveal themselves as the true "time thieves" they really are. Relationships either serve your ascent to greatness or expose themselves as the chains that are holding you down.

This is clarity. Sentimentality is a luxury only the weak can afford. The powerful man loves strategically, trusts selectively, and commits absolutely, but only towards what moves him forward. Your mission becomes your religion. You wake up for it. You sacrifice for it. You become ruthless in its service. But, let us pause this mornings edification series right here for today.

We'll pickup tomorrow morning with Part Two of our series. "Reading The Game." Until then stay in your word and we'll talk tomorrow. Blessings!

MISSION BRIEF

“The Bible encourages a godly wisdom that balances shrewdness with innocence, valuing understanding, good judgment, and knowing God's word, as seen in Matthew 10:16 (wise as serpents, innocent as doves), Proverbs 2 (seeking wisdom from God), James 3:17 (heavenly wisdom)”

PROVERBS 14:8 (NKJV)

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

"M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego) Part Two

Good morning operators! I hope you enjoyed your evening and are ready to begin this mornings edification. "Reading The Game." So, let's jump right into it. One of the first things you must come to terms with is that the world isn't fair. And the sooner you accept this, the sooner you gain your edge. Reading the room isn't about studying manipulation for petty gains.

It's about understanding the hidden machinery behind human behavior so you're never the one who's being played. Every interaction is a power exchange. Every conversation has a winner and a loser. Every relationship has someone who leads and someone who follows. Right now, if you're not comfortable with these dynamics you're probably the one who's being led.

You're the one who's losing power with every word you speak. You must begin to see humans as they are, not as they pretend to be. People are driven by fear, desire and ego. They make decisions emotionally, and then try to justify them rationally. They claim to want honesty, but punish you for providing it. They say that they admire your strength, but resent you when you display it.

The focused man understands these contradictions and use them to his own advantage. He knows that people don't respond to what you say, they respond to how you make them feel. He knows that showing vulnerability at the wrong time makes you a target, not a friend. He knows that giving too much to soon trains people to expect everything while valuing nothing.

This is why you must become a student of human nature. Watch how people move when they think no one's watching. Listen to what they don't say. Notice who they become when there's something to gain or something to lose. The masses are predictable. They follow patterns. They wear masks but use the same faces underneath. Once you see these patterns you can navigate any room, any negotiation, any conflict with precision.

But, here's a warning. This knowledge is a weapon, and weapons require discipline. The amateur will use these techniques to manipulate people for ego purposes, to feel clever, to win pointless arguments, to gain shallow victories. But not you, not the master. The master uses these techniques to protect his mission, to build strong alliances, and more importantly to ensure his energy is never wasted on those who would drain it.

Don't listen to what people will say about you once you finish your transformation. You're not becoming manipulative. You're becoming aware. You're not becoming cold. You're becoming calculated. There's a distinct difference between the two, and that difference is integrity. Use your knowledge to build, not destroy. Use your power to create, not just to dominate.

I think you've got the jest of this mornings edification. So, we'll stop here for now and start tomorrow morning with our new topic. "Becoming Unbreakable." Until then stay in your word and we'll talk tomorrow. Be blessed.

MISSION BRIEF

“Bible verses on efficiency emphasize wise use of time, diligent work for God, and skillful management, highlighting passages like Ephesians 5:15-16 (making the best use of time), Colossians 3:23 (working heartily as for the Lord). He who has a slack hand becomes poor, but the hand of the diligent makes rich.”

PROVERBS 10:4 (NKJV)

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

"M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego) Part Three

Good morning operators! Let's get straight to work. Today's edification is "Becoming Unbreakable." Now it's time for us to forge the armor. Stoicism isn't about suppressing emotions. It's about mastering it. It's about becoming a man who feels everything but is controlled by nothing. The Stoics understood what modern society has forgotten.

Your emotional reactions are the leash by which weaker men control you. Make you angry and you become predictable. Make you desperate for approval and you become malleable. Make you afraid and you become paralyzed. The focused man cuts this leash. He feels the anger. But doesn't act from it. He acknowledges the fear but doesn't obey it.

He notices the craving for validation, but doesn't chase it. This is power. Real Untouchable power. Fortune is like a river. Sometimes calm. Sometimes violent. But the prepared man builds dams before the floods come. Stoicism is your dam. It's the discipline you build in peace time, so you don't break during war. And make no mistake.

Life is War! Every day you're either advancing or retreating. Every moment you're either building resilience or accumulating weakness. There is no neutral ground. Here's what this looks like in practice. Someone disrespects you and instead of exploding, you go silent. You calculate. You ask yourself, "Does this serve my mission?" If yes, you respond with surgical precision.

If no, you dismiss it like dust on your shoulder and keep moving. Someone betrays you and instead of collapsing into self-pity, you extract the lesson. You update your strategy. You remove the parasite and build stronger boundaries. The pain is real, but you don't live there. You learn there and then you leave. Someone tries to provoke you and pull you into their chaos, you simply don't engage.

You recognize the trap. They're trying to make you leave your penthouse and come down to the lobby and fight in front of your doorman. You don't. You become the immovable object. The storm rages and you stand. The world burns, but you remain focused. This isn't about being emotionless. It's about being strategic with your emotional energy.

You don't waste tears on temporary problems. You don't waste rage on insignificant people. Let's stop here for today and we'll pickup tomorrow with. "Eliminate Weakness With Efficiency." Until then stay in your word and we'll talk tomorrow. Be blessed

MISSION BRIEF

“While the phrase "amor fati" (love of fate) isn't in the Bible, verses that reflect its spirit of accepting and trusting God's plan, even in hardship, include Romans 8:28, Philippians 4:11-13, James 1:2-4, and”

PSALM 139:13-16 (NKJV)

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

"M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego) Part Four

Good morning operators! Let's dive right into this mornings edification. "Eliminate Weakness With Efficiency." The Stoics had a phrase, "Amor Fati" it's a Latin term that means love your fate. Not because everything that happens is good, but because resisting reality is the ultimate waste of power. Your job is never to complain about the hand you're dealt.

It's your job to play it so well that everyone watching forgets you started with less. The "unbreakable man" doesn't avoid hardship. He transforms it into fuel. Every obstacle becomes a training deck for study. Every setback becomes data to be analyzed. Every enemy becomes a teacher. Simply because the RELENTLESS will always advance.

Let's talk about what happens when an unstoppable force meets resistance. Most men hit an obstacle and stop. Not us, we pivot and keep it pushing. They make excuses. They rebrand their failures as "finding a new path." Yeah, right you just got pushed down by opposition and instead of getting up and punching opposition in the throat.

Then immediately dropping down on one knee and throwing two more punches to his groin. You're instead trying to find an eloquent way to rebrand being a "soyboy." You’re despicable. Get outta my face. In ESD you're going to learn how to destroy obstacles, so completely that others will use the rubble as a road. Any obstacle in front of you, whether it's a person, a system, a limitation, or your own weakness.

You don't negotiate with it. You don't hope it moves. You dismantle it piece by piece until nothing remains. Here's the first truth about obstacles. They're tests of worthiness. The universe doesn't just hand you what you want. It makes you prove that you deserve it. Every barrier is a question. As to, "How badly do you want this?" Most men answer that question with words.

We teach you to answer that question with your actions. The focused man wakes up every single day and asks, himself, "What obstacle am I destroying today?" Not avoiding. Not going around. Destroying. Period. Point Blank!Because avoiding is only a temporary solution, but destruction my guy is permanent. When you remove an obstacle completely, it can never block you again.

And this is the subtle distinction that separates you from the masses. You don't just react to obstacles. You anticipate them. You study your mission and reverse engineer every point of failure before it happens. You ask. Tactical questions. Such as, "What can stop me?" "Who can stop me?" "What am I not seeing?" "What weaknesses do I have that could sabotage my mission?" Then you address it immediately.

Not later. The amateur waits for problems to appear. But, oh no my brother, not the master. The master hunts them down one by one, while they're still small and kills them before they grow. You must become the predator of your own limitations. You must stalk your own fears, your procrastination, your self-doubt, and you eliminate them with the same cold efficiency as a wolf eliminates weakness from the pack.

No mercy! No sentimentality! If a habit doesn't serve your mission. It's eliminated immediately with extreme prejudice. If a relationship drains more than it provides. It ends. If comfort keeps you soft. You abandon it. This sounds harsh because it is. But here's what society won't tell you. Comfort is a slow death. It's the warm bath that you and your teddy bear "snuggles" will drown in together while calling it self-care.

You see, the focused man understands that rest is strategic. Not constant. You rest to sharpen the blade. Not to retire it. And when you face human obstacles, the doubters, the sabateurs, the envious, you apply a simple formula. Ignore the irrelevant, outwork the competitive, and completely neutralize the malicious.

"Leave nothing but smoldering body parts in your wake."-Don Parker, Master Instructor Executive Self Defense.

We'll stop here for today and we'll pick it up tomorrow morning with Part Five. "How To Stay Sharp." Until then stay in your word and we'll talk tomorrow morning. Be blessed.

MISSION BRIEF

“The key Bible verses about speaking to a mountain are found in Mark 11:23 and Matthew 17:20-21, where Jesus teaches that if you have faith and don't doubt, you can tell a mountain to move, and it will be done, symbolizing that faith can overcome seemingly impossible obstacles, as seen in the passage”

MARK 11:23 (NKJV)

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

"M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego) Part Five

Rise and shine operators! We got more to cover in this mornings edification titled "How To Stay Sharp." Now, let's get to work! Irrelevant people like to make a lot of noise. In order to draw your attention. They serve as a distraction for the weak minded. Because they have nothing else to do. These people you just simply ignore.

However, the competitive ones are actually useful. They push you to stay sharp. Thank them silently and stay ahead. The malicious ones, the people who are actively working against your mission, require a different response. You don't fight them emotionally. You don't engage in their drama. You simply make them irrelevant by becoming so far ahead they can't even see you anymore.

If you live long enough, you'll find that the greatest revenge isn't violence. It's success that's so overwhelming that your enemies are forced to watch you rise while they remain stuck. We call this the "relentless advance." You don't stop when it gets hard. You don't pause when you're tired. You don't retreat when you're sacred.

You push through the pain, the doubt, the exhaustion. Because on the other side of every obstacle is a version of you thats stronger, sharper and close to untouchable. Every destroyed obstacle is a scar on your resume. Proof that you don't quit. Evidence that you're not like the rest. And here's the beautiful part. The more obstacles you destroy, the fewer appear.

Because the world learns. It sees you don't negotiate. You don't compromise on your mission. And you don't stop. So, obstacles start to move out of your way. The Bible tells us if you have enough faith. You can speak to a mountain and it will move. Let's stop here for today and we'll pickup tomorrow morning with Part Six "Cold Power Psychology." Until then stay in your word and we'll talk tomorrow.

Be blessed.

MISSION BRIEF

Let your conduct be without covetousness; be content with such things as you have. For He Himself has said, "I will never leave you nor forsake you." So we may boldly say: "The Lord is my helper; I will not fear. What can man do to me?"

HEBREWS 13:5-6 (NKJV)

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

"M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego) Part Six

There's a terrifying moment in every person's life. When they look around the room, look at their phone, look at the people they call family or friends and realize no ones coming to help you. No one is going to invest in your vision. No one is going to push you when you're tired. And If you fall, no one is going to catch you. For 99% of people, this realization is the beginning of depression.

It is the moment they break. They feel abandoned. They feel like victims. They cry out to the universe asking, "why me?" Why Do I have to do this alone?" But for the 1%, the outliers, the architects, this moment is not a tragedy. It's a baptism. You feel the weight of an ambition that no one around you understands. You are tired of explaining yourself to people who are committed to misunderstanding you.

You're tired of waiting on permission, waiting for support. Waiting for a team, stop waiting. The idea that you need support is the single greatest lie sold to you by a weak society. The great conquers knew this. History was not written by committees. It was written individuals who realized that being alone is not a defect. It was a superpower.

I am going to show you how to build an empire with ZERO support. I'm going show you why having no one is actually a strategic advantage that gives you a lethality that the supported man will never possess. But be warned, we're going to perform surgery on your mindset. We have to cut out that portion of you that craves validation.

We have to kill the herd animal inside of you. If you're scared of walking into the dark alone. Stop reading this. You and "snuggles" need to go back to the crowd. They'll keep you warm. But if you're ready to become the kind of person who scares the crowd. Then listen closely. From the moment you were born, you were conditioned to be dependent.

School taught you group projects. Religion taught you congregation. Society taught you networking. You have been brainwashed to believe that the only way to move up is to be lifted up by others. It's not what you know, it's who you know. We've all heard the adage. We all nod. We all agree. And it's nothing but poison and psychological B.S.

to keep you submissive. When you rely on who you know, you are admitting you're powerless without them. You are virtually handing the keys to your destiny. Over to people who act based upon their personal interests, not yours. "When you seek support, you seek debt." Think about it. When someone helps you, you owe them. When someone invests in you, they own a piece of you.

When someone supports you emotionally, they hold the power to withdraw that support. You're looking for a safety net. But a safety net can transform quickly into a spiders web. It catches you, yes, but it also traps you. The reason why you haven't succeeded yet is not because you lack support. It's because you are still looking for it.

You're burning valuable mental energy, scanning the horizon for a savior. We'll stop right here for today and we'll continue this topic tomorrow morning. Until then stay in your word and be blessed.

MISSION BRIEF

“Don't fear, for I am with you; do not be afraid, for I am your God. I will strengthen you and help you".”
ISAIAH 41:10 (NKJV)

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

Executive Self Defense Series. "M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego) Part Seven

"No One Is Coming To Save You."

Good morning operators! I'm going to spare you the formalities and we're going to jump right into this mornings edification. You must accept the ZERO POINT. You may be asking yourself what the heck is the "zero point?" Let me explain, the ZERO POINT is the state of absolute isolation. It is when you look at your bank account, your contacts and your resources and see nothing but your own reflection.

Most people panic here. But not you, my friend. You will see this time in your life as the ultimate freedom. You see, if you have zero support, you have zero masters. If no one helped you up, no one can tear you down. If you built it alone. You keep 100% of the throne. This is the rationality of the outliers. We do not cry about the empty room.

We use the space to build. As I said earlier, Al Capone used to say "It's better to be feared than loved." You cannot be both. Let's apply this theory to your loneliness. When you're looking for support, you're looking to be loved. You want people to like your idea's. You want your family to be proud of you. You want your friends to cheer.

This means you're operating from a place of "emotional neediness." Neediness repels power. Haven't you noticed? The more you beg for help the less you get. The more you try to explain to your small minded friends, the more they roll their eyes. They sense your desperation and desperation smells like weakness. Period. Point Blank.

To succeed with zero support, you must stop trying to be loved and start commanding respect through competence. This requires a shift in your internal engineering. You're no longer running on the fuel of encouragement. Your running on the fuel of defiance. You must look at the people that don't support you, the doubters, the ghosts, the ones who left you on unread in their message box.

And you must not feel sadness. You must feel a cold calculated drive. They don't believe. That means the market is open. They won't help. Good! That means you don't have to share the spoils. You have to reach a point where their indifference doesn't hurt your feelings. It instead sharpens your focus. Imagine a general on the battlefield.

He looks back and sees his army has deserted him. He stands alone against the enemy. Does he sit down and cry about loyalty? No! He assesses his weapons. He assesses the terrain. He realizes that a single man moving in the shadows is harder to kill. Than a clumsy army matching in daylight. He becomes asymmetrical. You are that general.

Your lack of support forces you to be smarter. It forces you to be faster. A large corporation with a thousand employees moves slowly. They have meetings about meetings. Go figure. You can change your life in an hour. Because you have no one to consult. You don't need a board of directors. You just need a mirror. Stop viewing your isolation as punishment.

It is a filter. It's just filtering out weak people who would have slowed you down. It's filtering out the fake allies who would have stabbed you in the back the moment you got a taste of gold. You are alone because you're being protected from the weight of other peoples mediocrity. So, the next question is how do you actually execute this?

How do you wake up every morning with zero messages and still work like a "one legged man in a butt kicking contest." It's simple. You enter your "GHOST PHASE." We'll stop here for today and we'll pickup tomorrow morning. Until then stay in your word and we'll talk tomorrow. Be blessed!

MISSION BRIEF

“Scriptures on being "undeniable" (or having an undeniable testimony/truth) in the King James Version focus on the undeniable power of God, the incontestable nature of truth, and a believer's steadfast, blameless witness. Key verses emphasize that true, godly actions cannot be spoken against, and faith in Christ produces an unmistakable, powerful life.”

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

Executive Self Defense Series. "M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego) Part Eigth

"The Ghost Phase 1"

Good morning operators! Let's dive right into this mornings edification entitled "The Ghost Phase." This is a concept that is derived from psychology and strategic warfare. If you have no support, you have no audience. If you have no audiences, you have no need to perform. Become a ghost. Most people fail because they talk away their energy.

When they have an idea they immediately run to tell a friend. The friend says, "That sounds hard." Or, "Are you sure?" Then Boom, here comes the doubter. The doubt enters. The energy leaks. But, you got a tiny hit of dopamine. Just from talking about the goal, which tricked your brain into thinking you achievement it. That's crazy in and of itself.

So, guess what you do? You stop working like an idiot. Once you enter "Ghost Phase" just remember a ghost doesn't speak. You must take a vow of silence regarding your ambitions. Do not tell your partner. Do not post big things on Instagram. Silence creates pressure. When you have a massive goal inside you and you don't let it out through your mouth, it builds up in your system like steam.

It becomes physical energy. It becomes anxiety. It becomes restlessness. Good! You need that pressure. That pressure is what pushes you to work at 2:00 am in the morning. When the "supported" people are sleeping under their warm comforter loosing yardage every hour that passes. Pressure is the only thing that will break through resistance.

When you're alone, you have the luxury of total immersion. You don't have to go to happy hour with fake company friends. You don't have to attend birthday parties of people you don't like. You don't have to maintain the social mask anymore. Just let the mask fall and let the monster work. Use your isolation to obsess. The world calls obsession a mental illness.

We call it a prerequisite for smashing opposition. If you have zero support, you must be obsessed. You must know more about your craft than anyone else. You must be so technically proficient, so strategically sound that you become undeniable. When you are undeniable, support becomes irrelevant. Let's end our edification here for today and we'll pickup tomorrow.

Be blessed and stay in your word.

MISSION BRIEF

“KJV scriptures on sacrifice highlight Jesus's ultimate sacrifice (Hebrews 10:10, 1 Peter 2:24) and call believers to offer spiritual sacrifices like praise, doing good, and living sacrifices of obedience (Hebrews 13:15-16, Romans 12:1,”

1 SAMUEL 15:22 (NKJV)

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

Executive Self Defense Series. "M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego) Part Nine

"The Ghost Phase 2"

Good morning operators! Let's hit the ground running straight into this mornings edification. So, here we go. When you're undeniable, support becomes irrelevant. And ironically that is exactly when support starts to show up. Isn't that ironic. People love to back a winner, they hate backing a struggler. As long as you are begging for help, you look like a struggler.

But when you are crushing it in silence, when you pop up outta nowhere with results, suddenly everyone wants to be your friend. Everyone says, "I always knew he could do it." You will smile. You will nod. But you will never forget who was there when the room was completely empty, which was no one, just you. To survive this path, you have to grieve my brothers and sisters.

This is the part that the motivational gurus completely skip over. They tell you to hustle. They don't tell you that hustling alone hurts. You have to grieve the loss of the life you thought you were going to have. You thought you would have a cheering section. You thought your parents would understand based on the rough history they've been through.

You thought that your friends would grow with you. But, now you see that they won't. You're going to have to hold a funeral for the version of you that needed them. This is going to be painful, but it must be done. You have to eradicate this visceral and physical pain in your chest. It feels like betrayal. You'll find yourself staring at the ceiling at night wondering if you're crazy.

You'll wonder if they were right and you were wrong. This is the test my friend. Every outlier goes through the valley of the shadow of death. It is during this period of time. When you have left the herd, but you have not yet reached the sanctuary. You are in the wilderness my brothers and sisters. And in the wilderness, you will hallucinate from time to time.

You will invent demons. You'll crave the comfort of the cage you just escaped. But you must remember that you cannot go back, you know too much. Once you have seen the reality that most people are sleepwalking, that your support would just be mutual sedation. You cannot unsee it. So, you must kill the boy, so the man can be born.

You must kill the dependent, so the sovereign can rise. This requires that you to become your own parent. Psychologically, this is called "reparing." But, let's go darker. Let's call it "self architecture." You must wake up and look in the mirror every morning and become the father you never had. You must look at your bank account and become the provider you never had.

You must talk to yourself, literally, "Get up we have work to do!" Stop crying. No one cares. Let's get focused. This is the only way out. You have to develop a split personality. There's the you that is tired, emotional and weak. And there's the you that is the commander. The commander drags the weakling through the mud. Eventually the weakling dies and only the commander remains.

You must be able to be cruel to yourself in the short term to be kind to yourself in the long term. You must deny yourself comfort now, so you can rule later. We'll stop right here for today and we'll pickup tomorrow morning with Part Ten of our Executive Self Defense Series.

"You Gotta Take The Pressure With The Profits." -Don Parker Master Instructor Executive Self Defense.

Until then stay in your word and we'll talk tomorrow. Be blessed!

MISSION BRIEF

“KJV focusing on spiritual energy and strength emphasize relying on God's power to overcome weakness. Key passages include Isaiah 40:31 (renewed strength), Colossians 1:29 (working with His energy), and”

PHILIPPIANS 4:13 (NKJV)

"M.O.E." - Mission Over Ego

Executive Self Defense Series. "M.O.E." (Mission Over Ego) Part Ten (Final Installment)

"You Gotta Take The Pressure With The Profits."

Good morning operators! Let's move, move, move directly into this mornings edification "You Gotta Take The Pressure With The Profits." If you have zero support, you have no one to enable your weakness. If you sleep in, no one wakes you up. If you don't work, you don't eat. The feedback loop is immediate and brutal. This is a gift.

Comfort is the enemy of greatness. Support often acts as a cushion that prevents you from feeling the hard impact of your own laziness. When you are alone, the concrete hits hard. You learn fast. You adapt. You become antifragile. Let's talk about the story you tell yourself. The average person tells a victim story. I couldn't start my business because I didn't have funding.

I couldn't get in shape because I didn't have a gym partner. Blah blah, blah. However, you will tell a different story. A villain origin story. I don't mean you'll become evil. I mean that you'll become motivated by the slight. Let me explain, Michael Jordan, the greatest athlete of all time, was famous for inventing insults. He would convince himself that an opposing player disrespected him just so he could summon the rage to destroy them on the court.

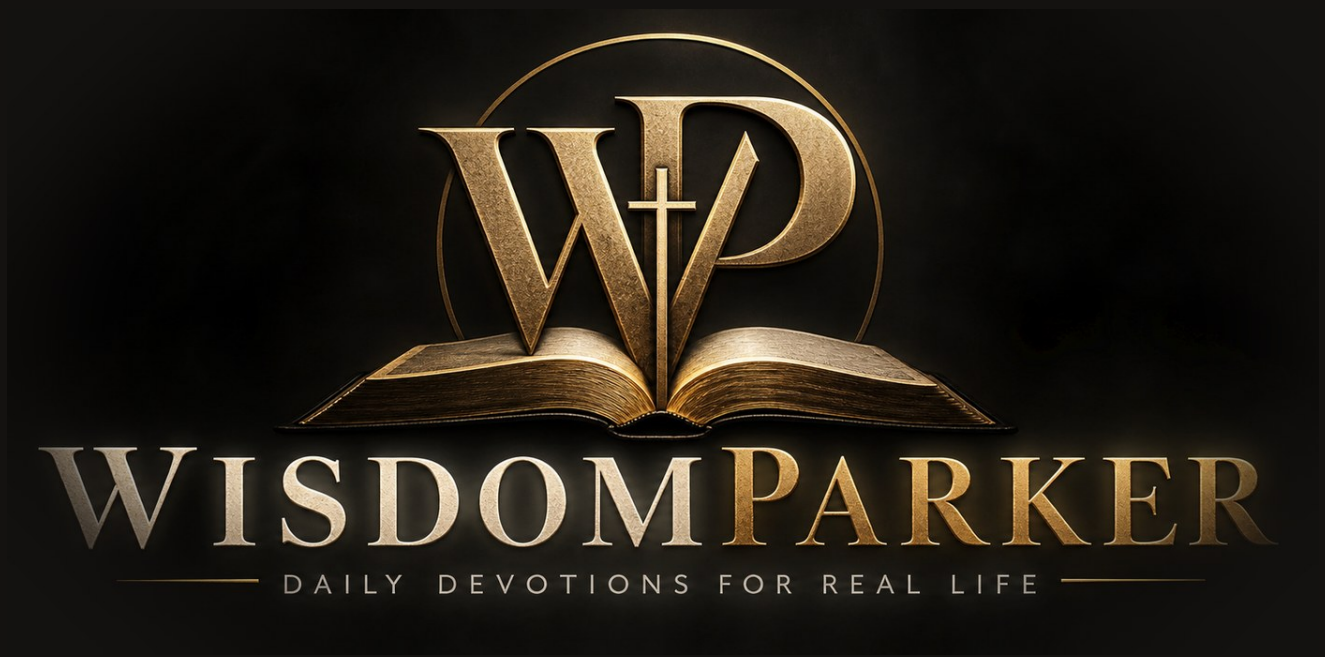

You need to do this as well. Take every rejection, every unanswered text, every smirk, every doubt, and place it in your mental furnace. They didn't support you. Good! They laughed at your idea. Perfect. They excluded you from an event. Fantastic. Now, let's burn it. Anger is a cleaner fuel than sadness. Sadness makes you heavy.

It makes you want to lie down and sulk. Anger makes you light up. It makes you want to move. It makes you want to bounce around throwing punches at the air like Muhammed Ali. We'll end our edification series on "Mission Over Ego" here. But, I'll leave you with these wise words from Albert Einstein. He said this: "Intellectuals solve problems but geniuses prevent them."

Stay in your word and we'll talk tomorrow. Be blessed.

DAILY DRILL

Write down one moment today when your ego asked for credit, a fight, or the last word. Beside it, write what the mission needed from you instead.

WP
WISDOMPARKER
DAILY DEVOTIONS FOR REAL LIFE